

JBWS Is Always Here For You

What Housing Services Are Available at JBWS?

When a person leaves an abusive partner, they may be forced into homelessness due to their partner controlling their finances and intentionally isolating them from social support. This means that they may not have access to reliable housing or income when they leave. Not having a place to stay or the funds necessary to afford housing should not be a reason a survivor remains with their abusive partner. JBWS offers numerous housing services including an Emergency Safe House, Transitional Living Program, and Rapid Re-Housing Program.

Safe House:

Arbour House, JBWS' Emergency Safe House, provides temporary housing for adults and children who need a safe place to stay. Both single adults and adults with their children stay in private bedrooms but share the living room and kitchen areas with other families. Clients staying at Arbour House are connected to the full range of JBWS and community resources.

Transitional Living Program:

When the stay at JBWS' Arbour House is not long enough to overcome the obstacles of abuse, survivors may enter the Transitional Living Program (TLP). Adults and their children can live in one of eleven fully furnished apartments for up to two years. While in TLP, clients are connected to the full range of JBWS and community resources, including life skills development.

Rapid Re-Housing Program:

JBWS' Rapid Re-Housing (RRH) Program assists clients in the housing search process, pays a portion of the rental amount for up to 12 months (clients pay 30% of their income), provides financial assistance for medical, educational, childcare, and transportation needs, and connects clients to the full range of JBWS and community resources.
